Superior Excellence. The reasons for PERUNA's superior ex cellence in all diseases, and its modus op-erandi, are fully explained in Dr. Hart from page I to page 10 though the whole book should be read and audicule to get the full value of this par excellent remedy. These books can be had at all the drug stores gratis.

W. D. Williams, U. S. Pension Agent and Notary Public, New Vienna, Clinton County, Ohio, writes: "I take great pleasure in testifying to your medicines. Thave used about one bottle and a half, and can say I am almost a new min. Have had the catarrh about twenty years. Before I knew what it was, had settled on the lungs and breast, but can now say I am almost well. Was in the army; could get no medicine there that would relieve me."

Col. E. Finger, Ashland, Ohio, writes: "I am happy to say I have used several bottles of your medicine called PERUNA, and my health has been greatly improved by it. I cheerfully recommend PERUNA to all who suffer with heart trouble, as being an invaluable medicine."

Rev. J. M. Ingling, Altamont, Il, writes: "My father-in-law, who resides with me has been using your PERUNA for kidney disease, which has afflicted him for forty years and could get no relief until he saw your medicine. I induced him to try a bottle, which he did, and the one bottle of PERUNA and one bottle of MANALIN has given him more relief than all the other, medicines he ever used."

Mr. Robert Grimes, Rendville, Ohio, writes: "My wife has been an intense sufferer from chronic catarrh, and after every other remedy had failed she commenced to use your PRINIA and MANALIM. They have helped my dear wife more than anything she has ever used. She has now taken two bottles, and is so much better that she will never quit its use until she is entirely well. It has wonderfully improved her sight. We think PRENIA and MANALIM will cure any disease."

R. Palmer, Pastor of the A. M. E. Church, No. 192 Canal Street, Wilkes-barre, Luzerne Co., Pa., writes: "Hav-ing used your PERUNA, and by experience became acquainted with its value, I write asking you to please send me five bottles of PERUNA and one of MANALIN by ex-PERUNA; our customers speak well of it.

wish for the sunny South or for Italy, for any place which would make one feel happier than could this dismal morning in Wisconsin. And then to think that this train could not make connection with the eastward bound train! It was hard nough to stop at such a miserable little junction at any time, but to spend three ours here this dark morning must prove the very refinement of torture. There are a dozen passengers who must wait and who prepare to make the best of their stay here. One couple, evidently just married, find the clouds of a rosy color, and they walk out of the smoky old depot to make a tour of the little town, talking eagerly the while. Two young fellows wander uneasily about, reading all the old tattered posters, glowing inducements to go West, and ancient time tables, which invariably decorate the stained walls of a country depot. These walls of a country depot. I young fellows finally uttered clamations of impatience at These clamations of impatience at the dreary monotony, and go across the street to the hotel, hoping to find something there more congenial to them. Two ladies at once take their departure for the hotel, and other people stroll out about the depot and there are left two persons, a man and woman, who, after a little time, settle themselves to reading to pass away the weary moments. He reads his paper, she her hook, and, occasionally, woman like, she casts a look at her silent companion, wondering what loved ones are awaited with eyes which saw not outward objects, but were introspective solely. An old maid, commonly supposed to be the type of discontent and unrest; but here, evidently, the type failed, for this face expressed the utmost of content. It is had been filled with much of sorrow for her, all her bright plans had failed of fruition; one after another she had bidden good by to them and had turned bravely again to face the coming of a new future, a future to be peopled again by her bright fancies all dead and gone from her except as they lingered in memory. An old maid she is, so far as years go, but no home is happier than her little ideal home. She has filled its rooms with bright little faces eagely calling to mother and the dreamfather is strong, earnest, helpful and loving. Her dreamhome is happier far than many a fine lady's real home, although she has not pictured any grandeur about it. Oh, no, she dreams that the carpets are faded from much sunlight and worn from the tread of many little feet, that there is much planning to "make both ends meet," but she has imagined unselfishness living in this little home, and loving unselfishness can make all trials in regard to ways and means seem very slight indeed. Her companion in this depot is an elderly person, a stout, large man, with keen eyes and a mouth at complete odds with the eyes, not belonging to them apparently. Often eyes do not harmonize in coloring with the rest of a face, but generally expressions are strongly akip. This man had a sensitive mouth, one with a nournnything harder than I've had."

"That is a bad thing to say," she said, in er timid way.

"A true thing, though," he responded, and the corners of his sensative mouth drooped a little more. I feel as if I had nothing left to live for. My wife died a year sgo—" here the voice broke. Distress often calls some souls out from their reserve, and here was such a said, and she said quickly: "Ah but you have all those vanished days and months and years to remember, all the leveliness of her life to think of now."

reserve, and here was such a sas, and shap and grad said quickly: "Ah but you have all those vanished days and mouths and years to remember, all the loveliness of her life to think of now."

"How did you know her life was lovely," he queried, a little sharply. She hestiated a moment and then said, simply: "If must have been, or you would not miss ber from your living so much," a tribute to the manly worth in the face she saw before her which was keenly relished by the owner of the face. He sighed and then looked for a time out of the smoky window, then said: "After all life is a strange muddle," and, receiving a look of understanding in response to this sentiment, he went out to me."

"Use don't know what is right to do, and yet we're punished by fixed laws!" If we don't do the right. That doesn't seem just to me."

"Oh, but it will come out straight in the next life," she cried eagerly.
"Id don't know what it is like don't were know! If haven't seen the next life, wit, and I don't know what we are hedged in and around in this life."

"But surely the next life will take away all the spugh places of this," she said; "it will make us understand all lifes seems."

"But surely the next life will take away all the topgch places of this," she said; "it will make us understand all this seems so strange about this—and there must be a future life; God will not put us into this life and let so many go out of it incomplete. That seems to be the strongest reason for a future, that seems to be the strongest reason for a future, that so many die with their life-work only just heggin;"
"Is that a reason or a hope with you?" he saked. She hesitated and did not answer, and just then one of the reatless young men who had been a fellow-passenger of theirs came in and glanced casually at the two.

swep, and loss their give dithis resides young men who had been a fellow-passen, ger of theirs eame in and glanced casually at the two.

That glance made her self-conscious, and a blush dyed the delicate face and she turned, in a dealded way, the pages of her book, as if she were determined not to let the stranger get possession of her wandering thoughts again. The young man passed out of the station, but the elicity one rose and walked restlessly about the room, knitting the shaggy brows occasionally at some troubled thought. The three hours passed, and 1 o'clock came, and a train came. "Can I assist you?" he gaked rently, reaching out a hard, brown hand for some of the numerous bundles she was carrying. She handed acmp to him and followed his sturdy footsteps in the train. They wondered a little why their fellow passengers of the morning were not in greater haste, but forget them presently in the busile of departure. He secured a pleasant seat for her and then one for himself at some distance from her. A few minutes of waiting, of lide watching of the dark landscape, so soon to be among remembered things, and the train moved slowly out of town, and asit moved a way another train steamed in. She looked curiously at the second train, but remembered that this was a junction and did not obey her first nervous impulse, which was to go to her whilom protector and ask him it he were sure they were on the right train, she forget the train soon, and watched his stern, set face, and felt sorry for him, and wished he might feel as sure of the future as did she. Soon the conductor came, and she watched him as he made his way toward her. When he reached her pro-tector, as ahe already called him in her inner coneciousness that individual caves inner consciousness that individual gave a quick start at some words uttered by the conductor, after examination of his ticket. A troubled look settled upon the resolute

after a moment:

"How can we get back?"

"It is of no use to go back to that function. We might as well go on to Chicago now and go from there; it will really take not much longer, and as you trusted to my leading in the first place, I will, if you will let me, see you safe out of this trouble."

leading in the first place, I will, if you will let me, see you safe out of this tronble."

"I am used to taking care of myself," she said, but her lips trembled a little.

"Where are you going?" he asked, and upon receiving her reply added: "I am going beyond there, so it will be no trouble to see you safe. I will telegraph your ditemma to your friends at the next station; we shall reach Chicago in two hours, and the conductor tells me we can immediately take another train back, so that really the worst of it will be the extra four or five hours in the train."

He remained sitting with her, and chatted lightly for a time, till hermind was diverted from the unpleasantness of her situation. Gradually they wandered to deeper waters, and talked again, as they had earlier in the day, of the problems of life, and into those queries and answers of theirs crept, ever and anon, a bit of the personal history of each. He learned what a desolate life hers had seemed to be; he learned too what a sweet, cheery courage must underlie her whole being, that the desolateness should have been so ignored, and he grew ashamed of his own repining over a lot which had so much of brightness in it.

When the train drew into the great depot in Chicago he felt that he had learned to know a pure soul, and she felt a deep pity for the lonely life that opened to her view. And as they took the other train, which was to take them rapidly to their destination, each felt a regret that a few hours more would part them.

which was to take them rapidly to their destination, each felt a regret that a few hours more would part them.

He sat silent for a long time after this wondering if he dared to do the thing he wished. He was lonely, set adrift in the great world by the death of his wife, and he wanted a true, womanly heart to sympathize with his. Could he do better than to sak this lonely woman, who had no kith or kin in the world to space his he knew anyone in his town, and finding she did know a person residing a few miles from his, he took his resolution

You can find out all about me from Mr.—" A moment he hesitated as he saw that she dld not realize what he meant; then he continued earnestly, looking down into the clear eyes lifted as fearlessly to his; "I feel as if I was looking into the eyes of my wife. Am I mistaken "The last words were hreathed rather than uttered, and then she understood, and the flame color mounted over the delicate features once more, and over the delicate features once more, and she said quietly: "Do I look so much like much yellower and richer looking, and I find them contrary to the statement given by this gentleman.

I also netice another statement, given by Charles O. Hayes, February 21, and contrary this statement; the P. Rocks are much tougher and will stand more hardship and cold than the Brown Leghorns, and I find them far the best winter layers. My P. Rocks bave laid 'nearly all winter, until the last three weeks they have stopcarry them in the parlor nor take a stove carry them in the parlor nor take a stove to their coop and burn up, five dollars' worth of wood to get three dollars worth of eggs and the same amount of meat, and curry and brush them down, and then-brag how rich I am getting on my fowls. I have two more Rocks than Leghorns, and have not had one dozen eggs from the Leghorns this winter. They are all the same age and all run together. The Lexhorns are good summer layers—lay well when eggs are worth from eight to twelve cents per dozen, as they are and have-been cents per dozen, as they are and have been this winter. Again, I hear that the Leg this winter. Again, I hear that the Leghorns will not sit, or in other words, are non-sitters. This is not so. They are not frequent sitters. I will give them all the credit that belongs to them, but they will sit occasionally and are as hard to break up as other breeds, and they are the most destructive hens I ever had. They are in all manner of mischief. They cau hoe my garden and gather the contents. I have had them go into my potato hills and scratch them out. Some may say it was because they were not fed and had no care, but they were fed and had good care. I feed my hens the year round. The cause care, but they were fed and had good care. I feed my hens the year round. The cause of the trouble was pure mischief. I consider the Rocks superior to them for a farmer to keep, for this and other reasons. The P. Rocks require less care, the chicks are stronger, the hens are better mothers, they make a largor, better table fowl, which is important to the farmer, as they can have a good dish of the very best meat at any time, without putting their hand in their pooket or leaving their work to go to town after it, and if you have a few to sell you have something more than a pigeon, and at the same time get as many or more eggs in the course of a year from prigeon, and at the same time get as many or more eggs in the course of a year from them. The Leghorns are the most handsome fowl we have, but are not the best. I want them for eggs and table. I want the more profitable hens, which I find the P. Rocks to be.

To look at the various follow-beings we neet in the streets is an interesting study. meet in the streets is an interesting study. Queer people some of them are.
